

As a Flight Attendant I feel the unlimited use of cell phones onboard an aircraft would increase the air rage that is many times barely under control. This would also be a perfect tool to assist terrorists in coordinating attacks similar to 9/11 style of terrorism. By using a Blackberry or cell phone to text one another they would be virtually undetected by any other passenger or crew member. Also, it would cause us to become referees to disputes when one passenger continued a call that everyone around them would be forced to hear. If you want to do something positive. Require the airlines to board computers that would detect the use of any 2 way transmitting device. Continual cell/blackberry/Wifi use would be a HUGE breach of Security. Think, rather than succumb to what must be an incredible lobby to get continual cell phone usage onboard aircrafts passed.
